ANNUAL BANQUET OF MAYSVILL COMMANDERY, No. 10, K. T.

One of the Most Successful of Social Entainments—Music, Feasting and Deing-Some of the Visitors.

The annual banquets of Mayaville Commandery have long been reckoned as the most important so-cial event of the season, and each recurring one is regarded as more pleasurable than its predecessors. In comparison, the gathering of last night and the festivities attendant thereon stand out in bold relief, and the Committee on Arrangements, composed of Sirs R. Enwaining, G. W. Rogers, J. L. Browning, R. P. Jenkins and John C. Lovel, may feel proud at the successful results of its labors.

In the afternoon the Order of the Red Cross was conferred on two candidates, Companions J. W. Farmer of White-house and J. W. Castle of Paintsville. This was followed by the annual banquet and hop, and early twilight found the magnificent Cos Building brilliantly illuminated "from pit to dome." By So clock the spacelous Asylum and the adjacent rooms were well filled with Sir Knights and ladies, Saxtos's Orchestra occupying the platform and inspiriting the scene with no excellent muse.

Gentlemen were bever more gailant, nor did ladies ever look lovelier. From the gray-laired Patriarch of three score and ten to the lads and lassies in their teens, all seemed bent on the full accomteens, all seemed bent on the full accom-plishment of the end in view—zn evening of social enjoyment. The attendance was fully up to any recent former occa sion, although it was a noticeable feature that an unusual number of the guests were non-residents. POSTMASTER GENERAL WANAMAKER'S report is a record of achievement quite up to the high standard of the other deep artments. Though he has vastly extended and improved the service in all directions, yet the deficit for the year has been reduced by a million dollars. His suggestion as to the division and reorganization of the postal service into territorial districts, with a supervisor or director over each, betrays the keen business faculty which has continually marked his conduct of the great department under him. He set a good example to his benomentic successor in utilizing the appropriation for the foreign mail service by arranging for forty-one ships, belonging to eleven different lines, to carry the American mails. Postmaster General Yilas Forused to use a similar appropriation, and gave the American mail contracts to foreign vessels. Let us hope that the next Democrat will do better.
